

EXPERIENCE COUNTS

Just because someone is a great printer, an outstanding plumber or a terrific baker doesn't mean they are necessarily proficient in being able to run a printing firm, plumbing business or a bakery. The fact is, they're usually not. This is where the role of the Professional Director comes in and many larger and savvier organisations take on non-executive directors to bring the skills, advice and experience they may not have internally.

Frank Lewis is one of these unsung heroes. He has been a professional most of his working life. An accomplished, internationally experienced director with a long track record of operational success in distribution, manufacturing and technology. He has led and managed a diverse range of businesses and sat on the boards of many leading organisations. With publications on governance and company culture he is widely recognised as an authority in the boardroom.

Frank is part of our 'Community of Successful Friends' and as such we wanted to do our bit to sing the praises of one of our heroes of business. www.franklewis.co.uk

IHTBB is on a constant search to find and recognise the valuable contribution that brilliant people make to all our lives.
